

New Year of Music at the Mountainside Library

The Folk Music Café resumes our great series of concerts on Thursday, Jan 19th at 7:00 – 8:40, with our long favorite songwriter, storyteller and musician, Spook Handy. To share the evening, we also welcome Christine DeLeon and her large repertoire of nostalgic and toe-tapping familiar tunes as well as timely, reflective and introspective originals.

Scott Sheldon of Sing Out Magazine describes Christine's voice "reminiscent of that of a young Judy Collins: Powerful, crystalline and assured."

Don't miss the song-share where you can dust off your instruments & try out a song. We end with an informal, live jam session for everyone. [Our next concert after this one will be April 19th – The Edna Project with Seth Farber and Liz Queler].

You'll love listening to the music while munching on fine desserts.

The Folk Music Café is sponsored by a Watts Foundation Grant and is free to all. We invite listeners and participants to enjoy the music, coffee, tea & dessert. See you there!
